Managing Capital Project Risk

9th Annual FMI / CMAA Owners' Survey

Rising costs — materials availability — adequate workforce — weather — financing...

Every construction project and program brings a wide array of risks. Which risks do owners identify as most important, and how do they manage those risks? Which risks do owners accept, manage, transfer, or avoid? Learn this as well as how CM, A/E, and contractor firms can apply the same risk management concepts identified in the study to their business during a time of economic and financial crisis.

The focus of the FMI/CMAA Ninth Annual Survey of Owners is on understanding how program- or project-level risks are assessed and managed prior to or during project execution (planning through turnover), and how they impact an owner's overall capital program.

Join us to develop a detailed understanding of the financial and economic crisis changes the risk management profile for today's owners. This session will cover: Risk Types; Highest Impact Risk; Mitigation strategies, tactics, and processes; and a framework to handle both traditional and non-traditional risks.

A session you cannot afford to miss!
