Constructability Reviews

What is Constructability Review?

Constructability Review is a systematic review of plans and specifications to verify the coordination of all design disciplines and consider the project's "constructability" from a contractor's perspective. The results are documents that are biddable and buildable.

Learning outcomes:

- Understand the value and importance of the Constructability Review Process
 - Timing for the Review
 - The Team
 - Review Follow-up
- Using the Constructability Review to minimize RFIs, change orders and claims
- Optimize project efficiency
- Increase owners' control in design development
- The future of Constructability Reviews...Building Information Modeling (BIM)
